Rural GCE Handbook Contents

- Module 1: Inequality and poverty - Inequality and poverty are caused by a variety of factors, include the type of employment people have, social inequalities they may suffer from, environmental or other effects of climate change
- Module 2: Cultural diversity, identities and stereotypes - Cultural diversity it's important in our society, especially for children and future generations
- Module 3: Media literacy - Almost free and immediate, digital information travels as fast as possible. However, all the information provided online does not necessarily means that it is valid.
- Module 4: Sustainability and consumption - Modern European lifestyles are unsustainable in many ways and are based on overproduction and overconsumption, putting too much pressure on natural resources and inducing negative environmental, economic, social, and health impacts.
- Module 5: Community actions - One of the main results of GCED is that citizens develop a point, a sense of justice, an impulse to act to fix a local or global issue and voice their opinion, defend human rights and try to make the world a better place.

About the GCE Handbook

The content focuses on the development of knowledge, related to global citizenship issues and the improvement of skills like global vision, critical thinking, cooperative work, ways of organisation and methods for planning, decision making, participation and activism, through training sessions.

The handbook is accompanied by hands-on activities facilitated by gamified learning techniques that can engage users into the learning process either this occurs remotely or within a classroom environment.

What are we teaching?

Each module of the training course will include:

- Theoretical background, which covers the most important knowledge of the subject, presented in easy-to-understand way
- Practical recommendations, which include interesting case studies and real-life examples, that complement the theoretical knowledge
- Lesson plans, to help educational process and make it easy for educators to develop their own training methodology

Next steps

Right now, the consortium is focusing on transferring the contents of the Handbook into a digital online learning environment. After the transition, partners will organize pilot training, that will ensure the usability and viability, and iron out mistakes or inconsistencies.
